STEP 1:

1. Disconnect the harness from your battery. Locate the relay and remove it from the harness.

STEP 2:

Cut off the large piece of heat shrink that surrounds the relay plug and then remove the cable tie.

STEP 3:

Remove the black negative cable from the relay plug. (Do this by sliding a small screwdriver down alongside the terminal and bending the tab out of the way)

STEP 4:

Remove the black wire from the back of the switch, pull it through the corrugated tube and then plug it into the back of the relay plug in the empty position. (This terminal may not have a tab, so you'll need to ensure it goes over the relay's male terminal correctly)

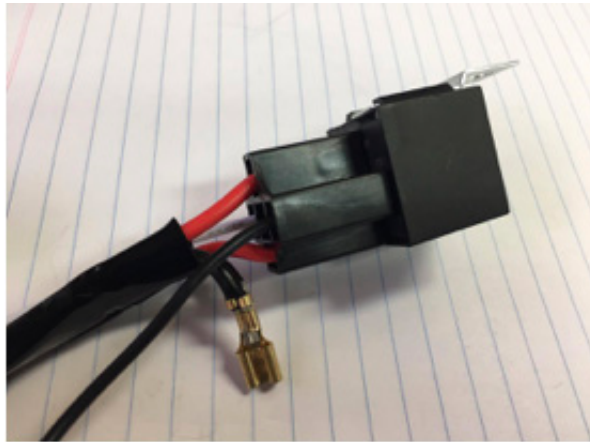

Note: If you do not want excess wire around your engine bay, you can cut this black wire to the same length as the existing white wire and crimp on a new terminal before inserting into the relay plug
